Sub-Treasurer of Boston, and Lieut. Chas. J. Buchanan, of Albany, N. Y. The remarks of all were excellent, and appreciated by all. It was the largest attendance we have had for several years. Maybe they were all waiting to go to Boston. Well, it is a fine place to go. We never had a better time nor more royally treated any-

There were present 36 of the 1st Regiment and 32 of the 2d Regiment, 68 in all, representing 15 different States. Lieut. Chas. J. Buchanan, of Albany,

At this Reunion Maj. Lewis M. Hosea, of Gen. James H. Wilson's staff, will address the veterans, the title of his address being the "Selma Campaign, or the Wilson defeated, captured or destroyed. No offi-Raid," this being descriptive of the brilliant campaign when 15,000 veteran cavalrymen under command of Gen. James Harrison Wilson tore through the interior of the Confederacy.

It was then hopeless, and it was clear to me as daylight that they were bound to surrender and return to civil life. But a right under the rules of civilized warmake them feel the power of the Government, and cause them to succumb to Hickenlooper, C. C. The question then arose in my mind how to apply the power thus entrusted by my Government so as to produce the resultthe end of the war, which was all we desired; for war is only justifiable among civilized nations to produce peace. Then the next riage or a divorce which is legal in the thing was to place the army in Columbia, State where the divorce was obtained or which I tell you is more of a place in the South than you are aware of. Years ago I thought Columbia would be the scene of the great and final struggle of the war. greatest satisfaction that I say to you that, after seven years continued effort, greatest satisfaction that I say to you that, after seven years continued effort, this year we obtained an appropriation from Congress of $250,000 to be used in the erection of a monument, upon these grounds to Gen. U. S. Grant, and the model for it will soon be selected, to this modest, charitable and just soldier and statesman. The whole world has given its tribute. From those whom we fought and defeated have come the most gallant words of praise, and touching in sympathy. President Lincoln, above all others, recognized his bower and ability when he handed him his commission and gave him command of all the armies, and assured him that he should not in any way interfere with him; armed him with all the powers of the President, with carte blanche to use them as he saw fit. Grant made his answer at Appomattox, bringing peace to our Nation and gratitude to the conquered. Gen. Grant was a man of few words, and when called upon to speak of the Army of the Tennessee, paid it this tribute.

"As an army, the Army of the Tennessee, and army, the Army of the Tennessee, Paid it this tribute.

Carte blanche to use them as he saw fit.

The Annual Reunion of the 7th Ohio Grant made his answer at Appomattox, ners of final victory on the parapets of Fort McAllister.' It is said that the old Army of the Tennessee never lost a battle and never surrendered a flag. Its corps badges-'forty rounds' of the Fifteenth Corps; the fleeting arrow of the Seventeenth Corps; claim also that when we took Atlanta the disc, from which four bullets have been cut, of the Sixteenth Corps-are all significant of the awful business of cruel war, all of them suggestive of the missiles of death. It gave the Federal army Grant, Sher man and Sheridan; McPherson, Howard, Blair, Logan, Hazen, John E. Smith, C. Wallace, Porter, Force, Leggett, Noyes, our National authority. So we destroyed distinguished President, who flamed out the very incarnation of soldierly valor before the eyes of the American people; all have a secure place in history and a secure one in the hearts of their country-

On this anniversary, as my closing words to you, two verses of Gen. John Tilson's tribute are most appropriate: "Ho! comrades of the brave old band, we gather here once more, smiling eye and clasping hand, to fight our battles o'er. To quaff from out the brimming cup of old-time memory, And bright relight the pathway of our old Tennessee. As myriad sparks of war's romance our meetings warm inspire; The heady fight, the anxious march, the jolly bivouac fire; days of doubt, of hope, of care, of danger and of glee; Oh, what a world of racy thought illumines Tennessee. "Our roster thins, as years pass on drop off one by one;

Ere long, too soon, to yearly call, there will be answer-none: Then as along the record page mourning columns creep, The whisper comes to closer still our living friendships keep. Another thought we forward cast to that not distant day, When left of all our gallant band will be one veteran gray, here's to him who meets alonewherever he may be, The last, the lone survivor of the grand old Tennessee."

I hurried back to Goldsboro, and dispatched everything with as great rapidity as I could, and on the very day I appointed I started in pursuit of Johnston, let him be where he might.
